

-----
Title: The Battle of Aragon

Author: Cyrus Gwydin
-----

Her Magesty, the Queen of EyE
dispatched a letter to
our Magesty, Queen
Andrasta for combat
assistance and the
demise of the
murderer who looted
her fallen body. With the greatest of haste,
our fair Queen
assembled our forces
to seek out this vile killer. When we arrived, EyE troops
were already assembled and ready.
We quickly greeted
our comrades in arms,
but spotted no killer around. We formed a search party to drive out this intruder. We found one vulgar
person by the name of
"Joe Blow". We killed
the assailant several times, but he pressed
a relentless attack,
mainly of words. It
was at that moment
the skies fell black as a gate opened up. A cadre of mixed
enenmy forces came though. A moment of confusion set in.
There was then a
scramble of enemy
forces as they knew
thier posistion lay
insecure. Thier
tactic was limited to Guerilla warfare, "hit
and run" tactics and
name calling. As EyE, TK and other brave
joining forces made

true that the Tower
was secure, enemy
forces began to flee
into the woods or
recalled away in retreat. It is beleved
that none of our forces suffered any casulities, and at the end of it, spirits were high over a clear
victory, a victory and
a virtuous act of comming to the aid of our friends, made
possible by the quick
thinking and bravery
of all that fought at the battle of Aragon.
May this battle's victory live on for all times.
God Save the King and Queen. Lord Cyrus